

Will the Trusts Control Air and Water?

How often have you used that good old joke about the trusts controlling everything but the air we breathe?

You may soon have a chance to turn this jest to earnest. There is a fat young trust forming just now that proposes to reach its tentacles into the air we breathe and draw therefrom a product which will enable the monopoly to "levy tribute on every loaf of bread, every pound of beef and every manger of oats."

We are quoting from their own prospectus. This interesting trust is now a part of the hustling group which is grabbing our water powers. With cheap water power they will produce a fertilizer which in Germany enables the farmer to raise 400 bushels of potatoes to the acre, and in slow old behind-the-times U. S. A. we average only 75 bushels. Other crops are benefited in the same proportion.

Energy in the soil; energy in the streams. Those are things we've got to wake up and protect; or else these trust gentlemen will do just what their prospectus says they'll do: Levy a tribute on every thing we use.

DECLINES POST OF MINISTER TO CHINA—F. A. DELANO, PRESIDENT OF THE WABASH RAILROAD.

Chicago, June 21.—Frederick Adrian Delano, who was offered the post of minister to China, but has declined the honor, was born in Hong Kong, China, forty-four years ago. His life has been one of steady advancement from one success to another. Having been born in China, he had an unusual interest in the Orient, and has kept a firm grasp on all its national affairs and its growth. Mr. Delano would have been a fitting post for the post had he seen fit to accept the position. He began at the bottom of railroad work as an apprenticed machinist and in twenty-four years has advanced to the head of one of the great western railroads.

HANSON IS TO TAKE ACTION

WILL SUBJECT DEALERS AND MANUFACTURERS TO SCRUTINY

State Dairy and Food Commissioners to Appoint Inspectors to Assist Him.

Two new inspectors are soon to be appointed by Willard Hanson, who is state dairy and food commissioner, and dealers in food products of various kinds in the state, as well as manufacturers of these products, will be subjected to the closest of scrutiny during the next few months, with the end in view that consumers of these articles will know exactly what they are getting when they buy, and the elimination of unfair and impure products. Up to the present time there has been but one inspector employed by the commission to assist Mr. Hanson in his work of ferreting out violations of the state pure food laws, and their work was confined largely to inspection of food stuffs in Salt Lake City. Recently, however, Heber C. Smith, the deputy inspector, began a tour of the counties about Salt Lake with the result that an astonishing number of violations were discovered.

Recently the state bureau, of which J. S. Carver of Ogden is secretary, held its regular meeting and it was decided that two additional inspectors were necessary, and after due consideration it was decided to appoint them so that the work could progress as rapidly as possible.

The commissioner proposes to carry on a crusade against dealers who are found guilty of using preservatives and other harmful substances in various forms of food products and those who have not been obeying the laws in regard to the proper labeling of articles offered for sale, the manufacturers also coming under this head.

Tests have been made of many samples, embracing various articles used as foods, by Herman Harms, state chemist, recently, which have revealed the fact that there was not strict compliance with the laws. One sample of bottled "strawberry soda water," tested during the last week by the chemist, was found to contain coal tar dye and, accompanying the report on the test, was a statement from the chemist that the soda water "is misbranded, in not stating that it contains artificial colorings and flavoring."

The officials of the department also have discovered other violations of the laws in the misbranding of articles, such as vinegar, the acetic acid variety of which has been found to be branded under other names, a form of "pure concentrated extract of lemon," which is said to contain only a small volume of lemon oil, as well as in so-called "olive oil," which, when tested, was found to be the cottonseed article.

As a result of a discussion which took place at last week's meeting of the board, representatives of several manufacturers will be asked to attend the next meeting of the board, on July 16, to participate in a discussion on the subject of why food products of various kinds should be properly branded as to the weight or measure of the product. One of the articles under consideration is, having been stated that four is sold under certain representations which do not comply with the law as to labeling.

It is said that the manufacturers will be asked to show why they should not set forth on the package the exact number of pounds which it is supposed to contain.

It is said that during his recent tour of the state, Deputy Inspector Smith found that preservatives were being used in meat throughout the state, which is clearly against the provisions of the law, and an effort will be made to force all butchers and retailers to desist from its use in meats and lard.

At the next regular session manufacturers and dealers from all parts of the state will be asked to attend and help in the formation of rules and regulations governing the killing of animals, care of meats, and cold storage. While practically all of the large butchering concerns of the state have United States inspectors in their plants, a large amount of the meat consumed in the state comes from animals butchered by farmers and the retailers have been forced to take their meat word, or nothing, to the effect that the animal killed was in a healthy condition and that the carcass contained no preservative matter. An attempt will be made to have the farmer or other private butcher who kills an animal for sale place a tag on the carcass stating that the animal was healthy and no preservative had been used when killed, etc., and recommend that butchers or dealers refuse to buy meats not so tagged. The bureau proposes to protect consumers against impure foods of all sorts in restaurants and hotels, as well as homes. The bureau will insist that everything manufactured or sold as a food-stuff must be truthfully made as to quality, weight or measure.

It was stated that a good deal of unwholesome butter was being put on the market for consumption and that in a great many cases short weights were given. Commissioner Hanson desires to call the attention of dairies, creameries, wholesale and retail merchants and the general public, to that chapter of the state dairy and food law governing the sale of butter, which appears below.

Chapter 99, section 1, state dairy and food laws; butter. On each package of butter manufactured and offered or exposed for sale in the state of Utah, there shall be stamped upon the wrapper or package the name of the maker thereof, with the address of same and the actual number of ounces contained in said wrapper or package at time of its manufacture.

Section 2. Penalty for violation. Any person, firm or corporation who offers to sell or furnish, or delivers for sale, any butter, unless marked as above specified shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor.

Approved this 15th day of March, 1907.

LETTER TO PEOPLE OF STATE OF UTAH

To the People of Utah:

A single incident covered by Monday's testimony in the Thomas investigation will serve to illustrate the why and wherefore of some of the goings on at the Industrial School.

The state expects that parents will care for children and in a way that will develop law-abiding citizens. When parents fail in their duty in this respect, the state asserts the right to take the child and assume the responsibility of its training.

For the care of its wards the state has provided with a lavish hand, as evidenced by the beautiful grounds which seem to offer every facility for character building, as exemplified in useful work.

The state employs a superintendent and a number of assistants—teachers, manual trainers, stationmen, cooks and matrons. While to some extent at least the institutions should be self-supporting, the state pays out a goodly sum to keep things moving. Every penny of expenditure by the state in this direction and sundry expenses for police and juvenile courts is intended for the reformation of delinquents.

Upon what grounds, then, was it assumed that the inmates must turn out at all hours of the night to put up a private rig for the superintendent's son? Was the state's humane purpose best served by Mr. Kneass and Mr. Scott, who refused to wake the inmates, or by Mr. Thomas, who censured them, and in all probability ousted Mr. Scott on account of it?

Fortunately the matter came before the board, that is, the difficulty which arose between Mr. Thomas and Mr. Kneass over the "insult" to Thomas' son. The board saw fit to suspend Mr. Kneass pending an investigation.

The board established a precedent which has not been followed in the present investigation. Mr. Thomas has not been suspended "pending an investigation," notwithstanding the nature of the charges brought against him and the standing of the citizens who brought them.

A fond parent may be excused for resenting a real or fancied insult to his son and heir, but what of a board that attaches greater weight to an incident which Mr. Johnson, attorney for the defense, has characterized as "trivial and of no importance," than stated charges of brutal beatings administered to the children whom the state has undertaken to "reform"?

In taking up the question of fitness, the evidence shows that Mr. Carlson, the blacksmith, got a raise a few weeks before he was set out. Mr. Scott's services were satisfactory both at the institution and on the finishing work of Thomas' house. A "botch" workman could not stay on the job that long without being found out.

The committee convenes at 9 a. m. Wednesday. The public is invited and will be given an opportunity to see the "Oregon boot," which is to be offered in evidence. It is said that the "Oregon boot" which has been used at the Industrial School is in violation of the state law.

The Avesta.

In its present form the Avesta is only a fragment of the original Zoroastrian scriptures. It is generally understood that those ancient scriptures consisted of 20 odd books of a million verses. The destruction of the two original copies, the one at Persepolis, the other at Samarkand, is attributed to Alexander the Great. The Avesta, being only imperfect remnants of these originals, is in compass equal to about one-tenth of our Bible.

CIRCUS WAS A DECIDED SUCCESS

FIRST BIG SHOW OF SEASON DREW THE CROWDS.

Each Feature Is of Unusual Merit—Company Will Visit Logan Today.

Yesterday was circus day—the first day of the season that a real, sure-enough circus exhibited the wonders of its menagerie, its freak show and its bewildering offering in the huge tent used for the main performances. Thousands of Ogdenites visited the Tabernacle Square lot, partook of the tempting pink lemonade, munched appropriate circus peanuts, and gazed in open-eyed wonder at the fascinating snake charmer, or the mid get Hotentot ladies (the only ones of their kind in captivity).

The circus was the great Carl Hagenbeck and the Wallace combination of shows, and it compared favorably with any of its rivals, excepting, possibly, those of the old-timers—the original entertainers in this branch of amusement.

The side show seemed to attract the greater number of the visitors immediately before the big circus performance in the larger tent, and the wonderful freaks, monstrosities and curiosities exhibited there merely whetted the appetites of the pleasure-seekers for the bigger things which were to come.

The big show opened at 8:15, and the immense canvas playhouse was crowded to its utmost seating capacity. The offerings of the managers all through the lengthy program were well received by the audience. The antics of the scores of clowns, the daring feats of the aerial artists, with the trained animal acts, kept the spectator busy turning his head to right or left in a vain endeavor to take in the whole show—three rings at once.

The program abounded in those European juggling, contortionist and acrobatic acts which are so often gathered together in companies of this kind. Every number was a star act, and the audience evidenced their favor by frequent bursts of hearty applause.

An immense steel cage in the center of the tent was used for the acts in which the more ferocious animals were used. An extra large and heavy lioness—a vicious looking beast—performed some feats in this cage which would seem incredible to the average mind. She rode a saddled elephant around the enclosure, dounded gracefully through papered hoops, and at the climax jumped through hoops of flame, while her heavy mount was making fast time around the small track.

An exhibition of the cleverness and aptitude of the polar bear when carefully trained, excited much comment. Almost a dozen of these great, but usually bad-tempered animals, performed in the cage under the direction of the ringmaster. There was a wrestling match later between the largest of the group of bears and a member of the troupe of male performers. The bear handled the man roughly at times, but the decision was given the daring trainer after a severe tussle, when he planted the bear flatly on his back on the turf.

The work of the aerial performers brought many manifestations of favor from the audience. A large net spread directly beneath the stationary trapeze high in the air probably saved two of the artists from a serious accident when a slight miscalculation of distance caused them to miss their holds upon their fellow performers' hands or arms, and they dropped heavily into the net.

The circus program was concluded with a series of races, including ladies' race, a tandem race, with the drivers standing with a foot on each of their mounts, and last a chariot race between a lady and a gentleman, each driving four heavy but speedy horses.

A short vaudeville bill was rendered after the regular performance after which the night's entertainment was concluded.

An hour after the close of the regular program in the big tent, the small city of canvas was taken down entirely, the field cleared of the debris and the greater part of the properties of the show on its way to the special train waiting at the union depot to transport the big show northward to Logan, where they will show next.

CHINESE FIRST GREW ORANGES.

From That Country They Were Introduced Into Europe.

At a time when tiny orange trees are to be seen as table decorations and oranges innumerable are for sale, it is not inappropriate to trace the introduction of the fruit into Europe. According to a Paris contemporary, after its introduction into Europe from China a Carthaginian conceived the idea of grafting the yellow mandarin orange upon the grenadier, with the result that we have the blood orange. Jean de Castro introduced the orange from the West Indies to Portugal, and the first attempt to cultivate it was made by the Constable de Bourbon, but after his revolt Francis I continued the experiments. At the time Louis XIV visited Toulon the Chevalier Paul, in compliment to the king, placed some preserved oranges on trees in the orangery. Ladies in the retinue, it is added, were under the impression that these oranges grew sugared.

Pride. "Are you at the head of your class in school?"

"Not exactly," answered the sturdy youngster, "but the boy that is at the head of my class in school isn't in my class in football."

One Exception. In case at Southwark his honor Judge Willis remarked: "I believe in accepting a woman's word—except, perhaps, in some instances connected with dress."—London Standard.

THE COMMONER AFTER TOGA OF ELMER J. BURKETT.

Omaha, Neb., June 17.—Richard L. Metcalf, editor of Mr. Bryan's publication, the Commoner, and a close personal friend of the late defeated candidate for the presidency, states that Mr. Bryan will be a candidate for the United States senate to succeed Elmer J. Burkett, the present incumbent and a Republican.

Coming from such a source, it is taken as the first positive announcement that has been made of the candidacy of Mr. Bryan for the senate.

Democratic party leaders are already predicting the election of Bryan and contend that the primary law passed last winter by the Nebraska legislature will pull him through. His friends declare that his defeat is wellnigh impossible.
